Re: REACH Certification for Coated Paperboard Products
(EVEREST® Folding Carton Board; Riegelwood, North Carolina; Augusta, Georgia; and Texarkana, Texas mills)

Dear Mr. Ingall:

Coated paperboard products such as EVEREST folding carton board meet the definition of "article" under European Union Regulation (EC) 1907/2006 Registration, Evaluation, Authorisation and Restriction of Chemicals (REACH), and are therefore exempt from REACH pre-registration and registration requirements except for the need to register any chemical components designed and expected to be released during intended product use. As there are no such chemicals used in our EVEREST folding carton board products, International Paper has no registration requirements for these products and they comply with these REACH requirements.

International Paper has also completed its review of the possible association of REACH Substances of Very High Concern (SVHC), as defined in Article 57 of the REACH regulation and updated on June 20, 2011, with its paper products as described above. We find no evidence of these listed SVHCs associated with our EVEREST folding carton board products as supplied to you. No such materials are intentionally used, and we are confident that any detection of inadvertent trace amounts of one of more SVHCs would be the result of circumstances beyond our control, such as during formulation, storage and shipment of product additives that could be used in the manufacture of these products or even as an artifact of chemical analysis. Any such presence would be significantly below and would not approach the 0.1 percent by weight threshold requiring notification or communication under REACH rules.

Very truly yours,
